But if you approach it with an open mind and without preconceptions, you can use the program to turn your images into works of art. In this book, you see a variety of images that have been processed for specific reasons in a variety of ways, but in Photoshop, the process is usually the same. You use the same tools, follow the same steps, and create the same types of edits for most images. The following list summarizes the essential steps needed to create the great-looking images in this book. 1. **Load an image into Photoshop.** This step is critical for creating a good-looking image. If your photo is not a good representation of what you want to see, creating the image won't help. I recommend using a 300-dpi image for best results. If your camera creates a 72-dpi image, you can scale it up to 300 dpi. Unfortunately, this process changes the image's color. 2. **Resize the image.** If you shoot landscape or architectural photos, you need to make sure that your image is accurate in terms of size. If the original image is too small, you can select the Resample Image command, or you can drag the box that covers the

Fonts A font is the digital representation of a typeface, which is the combination of text, based on a letter, style, and size, with special type characteristics, including stroke width, color, and effects (such as bold or italics). Using fonts, you can display text in a variety of fonts, sizes and styles, or effect the appearance of a text by customizing its style or size.

Effects An image effect is the appearance of a physical effect in an image. For example, you might want to change the shape of a selection or blur it, or leave a hint of a film effect in a digital photograph. You can apply effects to individual pixels, select a path or group of pixels, apply a particular blend mode or pattern, or clone the effect.

Pens and Pencils A pen is a digital tool used for drawing, sketching, and illustrating. A pencil is a pen without any special features, like brush handles, and is commonly used for rough sketches or doodles.

Spyware comes in the form of programs that are not listed as browser add-ons or toolbar extensions. Spyware is a tech term for software that is often installed without the user's knowledge. Many anti-malware programs are not really anti-malware. They do not actually delete spyware; they simply detect if it has been installed. Spyware programs are usually installed when you click an infected file link in an email. For example, if you click a link to an image on a website, and the link is from an unknown or untrusted website, the link is opened in a special browser window, and you automatically get a Spyware infection. The most common cause of spyware is phishing scams. When you click links from untrusted websites, it is most likely that you are lured into a phishing scam. Usually, the people behind the scam are based in a country that is known for phishing scams, like China or Russia. A common tactic is to imitate a popular social networking website and get your name and other personal information by pretending to be a legitimate person. For example, if you reply to a Facebook message, you may be locked into a phishing scam. The best way to avoid being targeted by phishing scams is to only click links from websites you know. A good anti-malware program will help you to identify and block all

Agustín de Lanza Agustín de Lanza Arismendi (7 June 1834 - 13 January 1905) was a Chilean soldier, landowner, and hero of the Chilean War of Independence. He is considered to be the first Chilean officer to lead a siege and the first to force the enemy to surrender. Biography Lanza was born on 7 June 1834 in Santiago. He was the son of Agustín de Lanza Romero y López, from a distinguished military family, and Elena Arismendi y Muñoz, daughter of Juan Luis Arismendi and María Muñoz. He began his military career as a cadet at the School of War, where he became a lieutenant of artillery. In 1857, he joined the army as a second lieutenant of the 1st Artillery Battalion. He participated in the battles of Abra Pampa, Chacabuco, La Florida and Rancagua, where he was the artillery officer of the infantry colonel Enrique Molina de Arteaga. During the War of the Pacific, Lanza was the artillery officer of general Carlos O'Leary, commander of the 1st Army Corps and brother of Pascual, who had followed the same route as Lanza in 1813 and had accompanied the troops of O'Leary in the battles of 1813 and 1814. War of Independence On the death of O'Leary, he took over the command of the army corps, with the rank of captain of artillery. Later, in 1872, he took part in the battles of Maipú, Colchagua and San Carlos, under the command of general José Miguel Moreno. In 1875, he was the secretary of the Army Congress, and in 1876, he became the chief of staff of general Emiliano Echagüe. He took the command of the 5th Army Corps in the years 1878 and 1879, during the punitive expedition against Valdivia. When the War of the Pacific ended, he was appointed the chief of staff of the Army, in the rank of colonel. For the surrender of the Chilean army and the end of Chilean independence, Lanza was one of the 12 men who accepted the conditions for an armistice, and was responsible for reparations for the crimes that occurred during the war. 1879 he took command of the Army Corps during the pacification campaign in Araucanía
