So is it then possible to watch any episode of the Saudi government’s latest purge and declare it to be a righteous act, an absolutely commendable effort to protect the country and its well-being from the scourge of the Western liberal agenda and reckless endangerment? As for me, I will continue to regard it as nothing more than an exercise of paranoia, a desperate response to the simple fact of the existence of armed foreign mercenaries patrolling the desert regions of Saudi Arabia—potentially poised to leave out of the country at any given time. That such images are used to warn the Saudi population of the perils of Western “infidel” influence is hardly a coincidence. Saudi Arabia is not Morocco or Djibouti, nor are its citizens fundamentally any more susceptible to Western “decadence” and “corruption” than, say, the people of Afghanistan or the Maqdisi. The government of Saudi Arabia simply wants to be left alone to conduct its own affairs in peace. Given that, I think it is safe to say that the Saudi government, as it currently stands, is extremely unlikely to deviate from the political course it has set. Thus, we should not suddenly panic, nor fret over a purported “return of the G-20,” but it is important 50b96ab0b6
